The Fox and the Grapes

A fox saw a bunch of ripe grapes high on a vine. "Those look sweet!" he said. He jumped, but he could not reach them. He jumped again and again. Each time, the grapes were too high.

At last the fox sat down, tired. "I did not want them anyway," he said. "They are probably sour." Then he walked away with his nose in the air.

1. What lesson does this fable teach?
   - Sweet grapes should be saved for later.
   - Fast jumpers can always reach tall vines.
   - It is wrong to blame what you cannot get.

2. Why did the fox say the grapes were sour?
   - A bird told him that the grapes were sour.
   - He had tasted one and did not like it.
   - He could not reach them and felt upset.

3. What did the fox do first when he saw the grapes?
   - He walked away with his nose up high.
   - He jumped up to try to reach them.
   - He sat down to rest under the vine.

4. How did the fox act at the end?
   - He walked away and pretended not to care.
   - He asked a friend to bring him some.
   - He climbed the vine and picked them all.
