The Lion and the Mouse

A lion caught a tiny mouse in his big paw. "Please let me go," squeaked the mouse. "Someday I will help you." The lion laughed. How could a mouse help a lion? But he let her go.

Soon after, some hunters trapped the lion in a strong net. He roared, but he could not get out. The mouse heard him and ran over. She chewed through the ropes with her sharp teeth, and the lion was free.

1. What lesson does this fable teach?
   - Being kind can help you in return later.
   - Strong animals never need any help at all.
   - It is best to trap those who bother you.

2. Why did the lion laugh?
   - He thought the mouse had told a funny joke.
   - He did not think a mouse could help him.
   - He was very proud of his big paw.

3. Which action of the mouse helped the lion?
   - She dug a hole under the trapped lion.
   - She roared loudly until the hunters left.
   - She chewed through the ropes of the net.

4. How did the lion's idea about the mouse change?
   - He learned that a small friend can help.
   - He decided to catch more mice that day.
   - He thought mice were far too tiny to see.
