Character Point of View

Grade 3 Reading Worksheet - Challenge Me

PencilGo

Name _____ Date _____

Circle the answer.

READ THIS FIRST

My Cousin's Closed Book

"Your cousin Anjali is coming to stay for two weeks, Maya," Mom said. I was not happy about it. Anjali is one year older than me, and everybody says she is brilliant. She has library cards from three different libraries.

When she arrived, she barely said hello. She carried her suitcase straight to my room and sat on the extra bed. Then she pulled out a thick book and started reading. She did not look up once, even when I showed her my rock collection. I decided right then that she was a stuck-up show-off.

At dinner, Dad asked Anjali about her new school. She pushed her rice around her plate. "It's fine," she said in a tiny voice. Then she asked to be excused early.

That night, I woke up and heard a sniffle. Anjali was sitting up in bed with her book in her lap. But the book was closed, and the room was too dark to read. She was holding a photograph against her chest.

The next morning, I peeked at the photograph while she brushed her teeth. It showed Anjali with two girls in matching soccer shirts. On the back, someone had written, "We'll miss you! Write every week!"

Suddenly, I remembered something Mom had said. Anjali's family had just moved to a big city for her mom's new job. She had left her old town and all her friends behind.

I felt my face get warm. Anjali was not stuck-up. She was homesick, and now she was in one more new place. My house.

At breakfast, I slid my best rock across the table. It was a purple geode that sparkled inside. "You can borrow it," I said. "And I know a field where kids play soccer every Saturday."

Anjali looked up from her book for a long moment. Then she smiled, just a little. "Do they need another goalie?" she asked.

1. From whose point of view is this story told?
   - Mom, who planned the visit
   - a narrator outside the story
   - Anjali, who came to stay
   - Anjali's cousin, who lives in the house

2. At first, what does the narrator think about Anjali?
   - She is lonely and sad.
   - She is shy but kind.
   - She is funny and loud.
   - She is a stuck-up show-off.

3. Which detail does the narrator use as evidence for her first view?
   - Anjali left her old friends behind.
   - Anjali held a photo against her chest.
   - Anjali asked about a soccer team.
   - Anjali kept reading and ignored the rocks.

4. What is Anjali really feeling when she arrives?
homesick for her old friends
bored with the narrator's house
angry at her younger cousin
proud of being so smart

5. Which clue might make a reader doubt the narrator's first view sooner than she does?
Anjali speaks in a tiny voice and leaves dinner early.
Anjali carried her suitcase to the narrator's room.
Anjali is one year older than the narrator.
Anjali has library cards from three libraries.

6. Why does the narrator's face get warm?
She is angry that Anjali took her room.
She is upset that Anjali cried at night.
She feels bad for judging Anjali unfairly.
She is excited about the soccer field.

7. What changes the narrator's point of view?
watching Anjali unpack her suitcase
finding her purple geode in a box
hearing Dad ask about the new school
seeing the photo and remembering the move

8. Why does the narrator offer the geode and tell about the soccer field?
She wants her room to herself again.
She wants to show off her best rock.
She wants Anjali to stop touching her rocks.
She wants Anjali to feel at home.

9. What does Anjali's question at the end show about her view?
She thinks her cousin is showing off.
She is starting to feel welcome.
She still wants to be left alone.
She would rather read than play.

10. "She was homesick." What does homesick mean?
sick from a long trip happy in a new home tired of being at home
sad because you miss home

Scan to get this marked free. No screen time for your child.
Print it · do it in pencil · scan it · PencilGo picks the next sheet.

Character Point of View

Answer Key - Grade 3 Reading Worksheet - Challenge Me

Circle the answer.

READ THIS FIRST

My Cousin's Closed Book

"Your cousin Anjali is coming to stay for two weeks, Maya," Mom said. I was not happy about it. Anjali is one year older than me, and everybody says she is brilliant. She has library cards from three different libraries.

When she arrived, she barely said hello. She carried her suitcase straight to my room and sat on the extra bed. Then she pulled out a thick book and started reading. She did not look up once, even when I showed her my rock collection. I decided right then that she was a stuck-up show-off.

At dinner, Dad asked Anjali about her new school. She pushed her rice around her plate. "It's fine," she said in a tiny voice. Then she asked to be excused early.

That night, I woke up and heard a sniffle. Anjali was sitting up in bed with her book in her lap. But the book was closed, and the room was too dark to read. She was holding a photograph against her chest.

The next morning, I peeked at the photograph while she brushed her teeth. It showed Anjali with two girls in matching soccer shirts. On the back, someone had written, "We'll miss you! Write every week!"

Suddenly, I remembered something Mom had said. Anjali's family had just moved to a big city for her mom's new job. She had left her old town and all her friends behind.

I felt my face get warm. Anjali was not stuck-up. She was homesick, and now she was in one more new place. My house.

At breakfast, I slid my best rock across the table. It was a purple geode that sparkled inside. "You can borrow it," I said. "And I know a field where kids play soccer every Saturday."

Anjali looked up from her book for a long moment. Then she smiled, just a little. "Do they need another goalie?" she asked.

1. From whose point of view is this story told?
   - Mom, who planned the visit
   - a narrator outside the story
   - Anjali, who came to stay
   - Anjali's cousin, who lives in the house

2. At first, what does the narrator think about Anjali?
   - She is lonely and sad.
   - She is shy but kind.
   - She is funny and loud.
   - She is a stuck-up show-off.

3. Which detail does the narrator use as evidence for her first view?
   - Anjali left her old friends behind.
   - Anjali held a photo against her chest.
   - Anjali asked about a soccer team.
   - Anjali kept reading and ignored the rocks.

4. What is Anjali really feeling when she arrives?
homesick for her old friends
bored with the narrator's house
angry at her younger cousin
proud of being so smart

5. Which clue might make a reader doubt the narrator's first view sooner than she does?
Anjali speaks in a tiny voice and leaves dinner early.
Anjali carried her suitcase to the narrator's room.
Anjali is one year older than the narrator.
Anjali has library cards from three libraries.

6. Why does the narrator's face get warm?
She is angry that Anjali took her room.
She is upset that Anjali cried at night.
She feels bad for judging Anjali unfairly.
She is excited about the soccer field.

7. What changes the narrator's point of view?
watching Anjali unpack her suitcase
finding her purple geode in a box
hearing Dad ask about the new school
seeing the photo and remembering the move

8. Why does the narrator offer the geode and tell about the soccer field?
She wants her room to herself again.
She wants to show off her best rock.
She wants Anjali to stop touching her rocks.
She wants Anjali to feel at home.

9. What does Anjali's question at the end show about her view?
She thinks her cousin is showing off.
She is starting to feel welcome.
She still wants to be left alone.
She would rather read than play.

10. "She was homesick." What does homesick mean?
sick from a long trip happy in a new home tired of being at home
sad because you miss home