Text 1: Priya planted bean seeds in a pot by her bedroom door. She checked the soil every morning before she brushed her teeth. She even gave the pot a name.

Text 2: After a week, nothing had come up. The soil was pale and dry, and it crumbled when she touched it.

Text 3: At school, the class bean plants were already tall. Those pots sat on a sunny windowsill, and the teacher watered them each day.

Text 4: Priya looked at her own pot. The hallway by her door had no window at all.

Text 5: That evening, she carried the pot to the kitchen window. She filled a cup with water and poured it in slowly. The window faced the setting sun.

Text 6: Every day after school, she touched the soil. If it felt dry, she gave it a little water.

Text 7: On the fifth day, Priya shrieked. Her mom ran in, still holding a dish towel. "What happened?" she asked.

Text 8: Priya pointed. A tiny green loop was poking out of the dirt. Priya bent down close to look.

Text 9: Her mom laughed and hugged her. "I thought you were hurt!" she said. Priya laughed too.

Text 10: Priya made a sign for the window. It said: Light and water. Do not forget! She taped it next to the pot.
